The money has been available for nearly two months but affairs move slowly at Washington and there has been delay for some cause or another in sending Dr. Cofer the authorization to proceed with the work. The delay is, in all probability, due to the officials considering their general estimates. After they shall have passed on this part of the work, they will send word to Dr. Cofer to have more detailed plans and specifications prepared and then to proceed with the work.

With the commencement of this work means the inauguration of the most material improvement to Honolulu harbor that the United States government has yet undertaken. Should the authorization not come by the Alameda Dr. Cofer will expect it by the following steamer. It is a question of but a few weeks before the work gets under way.

QUIET AT PLANTATION.

According to advices today every thing was quiet at Honolulu Plantation. There was no danger of any outbreak by the Japanese and the trouble has been temporarily settled by the truce.

"But," observed the editor of the successful monthly, "it seems to me that we should increase the size of the magazine. This month we have one hundred and fifty-six pages of ads. That leaves but four pages for other matter."

"Is that so?" exclaimed the proprietor. "Well, that's good. Oh, no; we won't think of enlarging. Why, half our readers won't even get through the ads!"—Brooklyn Life.

There was a sign in the window. It said: "These Suspenders 19 cents While They Last."

The sad-faced man walked in and accosted a salesman: "You say these suspenders are 19 cent while the last?"

"Yes Sir, yes, sir."

"A very few days, I assure you, sir."

"Good day sir, I wouldn't have a pair that wouldn't last longer than that."—Ex.

WHY KAHAELELIO BOLTED

The Republican Bolter Who Has Been Called the Jimmy Boyd of Maui.

D. H. Kahaelelio, the bolting Republican of Maui County, who was nominated for County Clerk by the Home Rulers, arrived in town yesterday morning by the steamer Maui. He says the matters in connection with his nomination for County Clerk have been misrepresented. He says that he never was a candidate for County Clerk, George Maxwell being the only candidate. He was a candidate for Tax Assessor and Collector and was nominated. But afterwards Judge Kalua, his foster father, asked him not to run against W. T. Robinson, the Republican candidate for Assessor, and thereupon he stated to the convention this request and declined the nomination with the approval of the convention. His brother D. K. Kahaelelio was thereupon nominated for Assessor. Maxwell withdrew from the position of nominee of the convention for County Clerk, and D. H. Kahaelelio was nominated.

Kahaelelio gives as his reason for withdrawing from the Republican party not because the party failed to nominate him for office, for he says he could have been nominated if he had wanted to be, but because of the animosity to him of W. F. Pogue. This animosity, Kahaelelio says, dates back to the legislature of 1898. Last year, Kahaelelio says, he withdrew from the contest for nomination to the legislature in order if possible to secure harmony in the party. But it was so evident to him, he says, that Pogue's opposition to him was just as lively as ever, that he came to the conclusion that his political future would be best served by getting into a different party from that of Pogue.

GET PIN MONEY.

Some facts have become known during the last few days which throw some light on the trade in motor cars among people of position. More than one lady in society is adding considerably to her income by this means. During the past twelve months a certain well known lady of title alone has sold twenty, and when it is realized that the commission varies from 15 to 20 per cent, and that the price of a car may be anything between $2500 and $5000, it will readily be seen how profitable an agency is to a lady who has opportunities of singing the praises of a particular make of car to wealthy friends.

To help his titled agent the manufacturer places one, sometimes two, cars at her disposal, usually at her country house, sends down competent chauffeurs in smart uniforms, and keeps the cars in thorough-going order, knowing well that a good run is more likely to influence a prospective purchaser than most things.

My lady manages her share of the business quite easily. Several non-motoring men and women are invited to her place in the country for the week-end. A smart motor car, perhaps two, meets them at the station and conveys them to the house some few miles away in a few minutes, and that short run suffices to break down prejudices and create interest in the perhaps hitherto despised mode of locomotion.

The fair hostess is charmed that they have enjoyed the ride so much, is astonished to hear that they have never ridden in a motor car before, and promises a long drive on the morrow. The chauffeur makes quite sure that his car is in perfect running order, for on no account must there be a breakdown, and the next morning, after a leisurely breakfast, a party is made up, and a nice little run to the coast and back—about 100 miles or so—is easily accomplished before dinner. The non-motoring guests are converted at once and forever. They place orders for cars exactly like my lady's, and mention her name as a surety of special attention. The order is booked and my lady receives a check for commission.—Tit Bits.

AT THE EXPERIENCE MEETING.

"Brethren and sisters," said the stranger who had just risen, "I want to confess that I was once the slave of drink. I—"

"Amen! Hallelujah!" shouted an enthusiastic old lady.

"I was a mere child when I began to form the pernicious habit. Perhaps my parents were to blame for not looking after me more carefully, but we will let that pass. I grew up to be a young man and my appetite grew with me. At last the demon obtained such a mastery over me—I forgot to mention that it was not Demon Rum, but the Demon Soft Drink—that at the mere sight of a confectioner's or a drug store I experienced a mad desire to rush in and have an ice-cream soda. Remonstrances had no effect. When I read in the paper that in yesterday's hot spell 12 persons had been prostrated by the heat and 51 by the soda fountains I laughed, the warning to scorn. But at last my turn came. One day, after putting away 15 glasses of my favorite beverage, I did not feel well. I went to a doctor. After I explained matters he drew such a picture of the future condition of the coats of my stomach that I summoned up all my will power and resolved to reform from that moment.

"Brethren and sisters, I am a changed man. From that hour I have never touched soft drink. When the hot weather comes I indulge in beer—with moderation, brethren and sisters—that is to say, with as much moderation as you can reasonably expect from a thirsty man in summer. And I feel, brethren and sisters, like a fighting cock."

Notwithstanding which statement a muscular Christian advanced upon him at this juncture and put him out.

HOW WE REGARD THE "SMART SET."

Dean Richmond, in speaking of the insane faction of the "smart set," which keeps its follies so constantly before the public, says:

The senseless class in the public imitates them; the sober, thinking class have a pitying contempt for them; the earnest Christians blush for them; the patriotic American abhors them, and the genuine aristocracy of America and Europe laugh at them.

The last attitude is the only one that is likely to have any reformatory effect.

THE SILENT AGENT.

Percival Link of England should be raised to the peerage without delay, for he has invented a silent insurance agent on the nickel-in-the-slot principle. The machine is now in use in a few places, and issues accident insurance policies good for one week up to the amount of the policy holder's weekly earnings. One can put a penny in the slot and then dodge a pencil that is hurled at him by the machine. With the pencil the possible victim writes his name on a card that rushes from the mouth of the machine, and is swallowed again as soon as it has been written on. As it goes down the machine's teeth bite the hour and date on the ticket, which is put on record somewhere in the affair. Then an insurance policy appears, mysteriously filled out, and all the policy holder then has to do is to go somewhere and get hurt.

NEW BEAST OF BURDEN.

A short time ago it was noted that there was to be an endeavor to tame and breed the zebra of Africa in captivity, that is, to domesticate this swift and beautiful animal. Now the intelligence comes of the probable success of crossing the horse and the zebra, experiments in which have been carried on for some years by Germans in their "sphere of influence" in East Africa. Prof. Cassar Ewart has been trying this since 1895, and the result of crosses from mares and zebra stallions is what is called the "zebrula," which is hardy, more lively than the mule, and quite as intelligent. Moreover, this offspring of the zebra and the common mare retains the immunity of the zebra itself from the horse disease of Africa and the tsetse fly.

SAILOR FELL FROM ALOFT

AND WAS INSTANTLY KILLED
THIS MORNING ABOARD THE STEAMER KE AU HOU.

A fatal accident occurred at the Inter-Island wharf this morning. Simama a Japanese sailor of the Steamer Ke Au Hou, was killed instantly by falling from aloft from the mainmast of the vessel. So far can be learned, the accident appears to have been the result of his own carelessness.

The Japanese climbed aloft to the fore mast head for the purpose of making fast the cargo pennant. He climbed up the fore stays. When he reached the point on the mast where the stays and halyards are made fast he took a bowsman's chair which he had carried with him, and inched this chair fast to the halyards. He used a small piece of rope to make his chair fast. He then seated himself in the chair and prepared to but the pennant in place.

It was necessary to cut the line holding the pennant. The circumstances indicate that the Japanese made a mistake and cut the rope that held the bowsman's chair. In any event this rope gave and he fell to the deck below, a distance of about 60 feet. No body appears to have seen the man fall. Captain Tullett was standing on the forward part of the upper deck of the steamer and his attention was attracted to the affair by hearing the body of the sailor strike the deck. The body evidently struck on the back for so far as a cursory examination showed, the skull had not been crushed. The police were notified of the accident and removed the body to the morgue. An inquest will be held.

The deceased had been employed on the steamer for several years and was quite an efficient sailor. An examination of the bite of the rope that had been used to hold the bowsman's chair in place, showed that the rope had been cut. The Japanese is thought by Captain Tullett and the other officers about the Inter-Island wharf to have in some manner cut this rope, instead of that which was to release the pennant.

PRAYER OF THE PREDACEOUS (W. E. P. French in Life.)

Now this is the prayer of the Bull and Bear

At the shrine of the God of Gold.
Where the shadow cast by a Christian spire

And the western sun's effulgent fire
Down a narrow street unrolled;

"O Lord of the Merger and Trust and Pool,

Of Gammon and Greed and Sham;
'Man cannot live by bread alone,'

So, give us our daily lamb,
'We need his fleece to keep us warm,'

His fat when the nights are cool;
And, after all, he's an only child

And twin-brother to a fool.

"We won't do a thing to the fresh young sheep

But teach him to gambol and play;
We'll feed him on only the best of 'shorts'

And beautiful 'long' baled hay.

"He shall not suffer the pangs of thirst
This woolly stray from the flock—
For innocence we love and prize,
And always water our stock.

"The lion lies down with the lamb (inside),

So why not the Bull and Bear?
We will show him 'cover,' we'll take him in.

We've plenty of room to spare,
'His mint-sauce let him bring with him—

The 'long green' that's nice with game—
And he shall join our Browning Club

And learn what is in a name.

"Then let us return to our mutton—
With current funds (which is jam)—
He shall have a plunge in our deepest pool,

And come out a steel-spring-lamb.
'O slightly Alloyed Auriferous God,
Hear thy humble beasts who prey!
The Knights of the Golden Fleece are we,
And we worship thee night and day."

FLORIDA'S HOTEL POPULATION.

Philosophically Considered From the Local Point of View.

One of the least populous among the older states of the American Union, Florida, presents a problem of government almost unique in that it contains within itself a population important by comparison with her own that is still not of herself and is much alien in training, thought and habits of life. The man whose interests and feelings bind him to our soil sees the Englishman pass who traces his ancestry to the Norman conquest, and who rules his patrimonial acres by right of a deed from the sword hand dead 500 years ago; the French noble passes him the time of day, and a German may give him personal recollections of the iron chancellor. The broker from Wall street, whom populists have taught him to look upon as a natural enemy, may chuck his baby under the chin, and the republican leader in the Senate, who has helped to give him an appropriation for a neighboring harbor, may fish with him all day. These pass and repass as the seasons come and go, but we need not look upon them as mere strangers, because each is necessary to the other.

The Floridian gives to these great communities within our own the safety and confidence of assured law and order; from these visitors we may learn the cosmopolitanism that to others can only come as the best fruit of long travel, and they are, or should be, the embodiment of a market brought to our own doors—a blessing for which the nation has gone to the Philippines, and will again, perhaps, send its army to invade Asia.
